SCC educational opportunities students have writings published

By: Julia Hartbarger

Students in Southwestern Community College's educational opportunities program can now add "published authors" to their list of achievements.

"Through Their Eyes: The Quill Took Flight" is a book of writings from English as a Second Language (ESL) and high school equivalency students.

"We are so appreciative of the grant from the SCC Foundation Grant Committee that allowed us to do this," said Dr. Patricia Graham, SCC's educational opportunities instructor who also served as editor, compiler and translator for the book. "This gave the students an opportunity to express themselves, and it was such a blessing to see everyone work so well together."

The book, which features poetry, fiction and non-fiction stories, has both an English version and the original work in the students' respective languages.

In addition to Graham, Kay Wolf, SCC's educational opportunities coordinator, served as translator and editor. Amy Russ, SCC's developmental English instructor, also served as an editor.

The different languages and cultures found in the book include: Gujarati, Chinese, Vietnamese, Spanish, Arabic, Thai and English as well as Appalachian and Cherokee tales.

"This book allows us to see their culture and the struggles they have faced through their point of view," said Graham. "Seeing the look on their faces when they saw their names next to their work meant so much to me."

Books can be purchased on Amazon.com. For more information about SCC's educational opportunities program, visit www.southwesterncc.edu, call 828.339.4262 or checkout listings on the next page.

SCC HONORS RECENT PHLEBOTOMY GRADS; NEXT CLASS STARTS IN JANUARY

Ten students recently completed the phlebotomy program through Southwestern Community College's occupational training division.

It was the largest class since SCC began offering the condensed, accelerated certificate option two years ago, and officials have announced a new class will be forming in January.

The class costs $185 plus books, insurance, background checks, immunizations, drug screening and uniforms.

"We're noticing a significant increase in interest, both from employers and students," said Scott Sutton, director of occupational training at SCC. "Since we started offering this program, our graduates have consistently been able to find quality jobs. The demand for these skills remains high throughout our service area of Jackson, Macon, Swain Counties and the Qualla Boundary."

The total program runs for just under three months. Approximately half of that span is spent meeting twice a week in class; the other half is clinical training.

For more information or to enroll in the next class, call 828.339.4426 or write ldowns@southwesterncc.edu.

COMMUNITY COLLEGE

FOUNDATION

SCC Foundation value doubles during Dr. Tomas' tenure

Since Dr. Don Tomas was named president of Southwestern Community College six years ago, the SCC Foundation's total value has more than doubled.

That means the Foundation currently has more than $5.5 million in the bank to support student success - primarily through scholarships. In 2011, when Dr. Tomas became SCC's sixth president, the SCC Foundation had a total portfolio valuation of approximately $2.59 million.

A big chunk of that increase came from the establishment of the $1 million Student Success Scholarship Endowment – by far the largest in SCC history. That campaign began in 2013 and reached its seven-figure goal during the Bluegrass, Blue Jeans & Bling gala on September 16. Multiple other scholarship endowments and estate planning commitments have come together in recent years under the leadership of Brett Woods, director of the SCC Foundation.

"I honestly have no words to describe the generous nature of the people throughout our service area," Dr. Tomas said. "Our donors absolutely recognize the value of SCC. They get it. They understand what our students, our employees and our alumni bring to this region. They support us, and they change our students' lives one gift at a time.

"Our hope is that we can continue to grow, keep building momentum and maybe even double our Foundation's value again," Dr. Tomas added. "Vance Davidson, a member of our SCC board of trustees, often says that we give students 'a hand up, not a handout.' Even though we're helping more students than ever before, there are still many more who need a hand up so that they can pursue their college education. And we want to be able to provide that for them."

To learn more about giving options through the SCC Foundation, contact Brett Woods at 828.339.4241 or b_woods@southwesterncc.edu.

CLASS VACANCY

Need real estate training? SCC's got you covered

It's a great time to be in the business of selling houses and land in Western North Carolina.

According to all the economic indicators and research, the region's real estate market is thriving.

Whether you're a seasoned real-estate broker or just looking to get started in the field, Southwestern Community College offers the professional licensure classes you need to be successful. While selling real estate isn't particularly easy, it can be flexible, lucrative and fun.

"The economy is improving, and anytime is a good time to learn more about the real estate process," said Renee Cooney, who owns and operates Legacy Properties by Renee, LLC. She was named the 2016 Realtor of the Year® by Carolina Smokies Association of Realtors, recently chosen to participate in the NC REALTORS® William C. Bass Leadership Academy, and she will be teaching several of SCC's classes this spring.

"It's important to know that real estate is not a 9-5 job," she added. "It's a lifestyle. It's a career that truly reflects the motivation and dedication to the work and people involved."

SCC offers pre-licensing and post-licensing classes as well as the mandatory continuing education credits that realtors need to keep their licenses current.

"It's exciting to see how the industry has bounced back," said Scott Sutton, SCC's director of occupational training. "Our goal at SCC has always been to provide training that the community needs, and it's clear to me that there's a huge demand for real estate training and we are here for you every step along the way."

According to Cooney, year-to-date numbers show that homes are selling more quickly, and the average sales price is increasing from $133,000-$153,000. Cooney's also noticed that her class sizes have doubled in the past year, and she welcomes the opportunity to show others how to be successful in an industry that's been fulfilling for her personally.

"I enjoy education, leadership, meeting people and teaching them what real estate is all about," Cooney said. "It's extremely rewarding to help others make their dreams a reality and become successful professionals."

SCC SMALL BUSINESS CENTER RANKED AMONG TOP 10 IN STATE

By: Julia Hartbarger

Southwestern Community College's Small Business Center has helped many small businesses succeed over the years; whether they were just starting out or established for decades.

So many businesses have been helped that SCC's Small Business Center has been ranked among the top 10 in NC.

This success is due to the passion and dedication of SCC Small Business Center director Tiffany Henry, who recently earned the "Innovation Award - Services and Collaboration" from the N.C. Community College System Small Business Center Network. It's the second time she's earned this award in the last three years.

"These small businesses and entrepreneurs are the backbone of our economy," Henry said. "Having a small part in their success and growth is beyond rewarding."

In the past year, SCC's Small Business Center has served almost 1,900 people through seminars and programs. Henry has worked with 106 clients that resulted in 27 business startups which created 241 jobs. There were also 69 jobs that were retained through helping existing businesses.

"These small businesses and entrepreneurs are the backbone of our economy. Having a small part in their success and growth is beyond rewarding."

"We continue to be amazed and inspired by the way Tiffany helps small businesses succeed," said Dr. Thom Brooks, vice president for instruction and student services at SCC. "She finds out what services are needed and she delivers. She's an outstanding resource for existing and aspiring business owners throughout our service area."

SCC's Small Business Center offers seminars, workshops, private one-on-one counseling, training and much more to help business owners at every stage. For more information about SCC's Small Business Center, visit www.southwesterncc.edu/SBC or call 828.339.4211.
